from a walk i took yesterday in the central ward. the four cop car patrol was following a group of young kids when i started filming, telling them and others with their loud speakers about murphy's executive order and to get inside. the other photos are from raymond blvd where the old morris canal stood in the 19th and early 20th centuries, itself participating in the making of the industrial newark and the oppressed workers who suffered there-under, all in a city and state where abolishing direct enslavement didn't happen until the conclusion of the us civil war.
